

EAGLE: The Eagle is known as the "Chief of all birds" to most Indians. Like the ancients, the Indian regards the Eagle as an emblem of strength and courage. They hold the bird in great awe, in many instances are superstitious about it, and in other instances worship it.

EAGLE DANCER: The Eagle Dancer imitates the eagle, a sacred and powerful spirit, with graceful soaring and sweeping arm and body movements, telling the story of the bird's flight, capture and death. The dancer portrays the wounded and dying eagle with downward quivering and fluttering actions; then lies motionless at the end of the dance.
